

The final project itself works very simply. All you need to do once the program is running is enter the text you want to encode in the text box provided by processing, the text would then be sent to the Arduino and encoded into morse code. The encoded text would then be converted into a pattern for the LED with the dots and dashes of the Morse code governing how long the LED would light up for and spaces governing the delays between flashes.